Developing Great Readers

“Books, even in the early grades, ought to be sources of delight and information, not exercises to be mastered. A good, classical education instills a passion for books in the student.”

Susan Wise Bauer

This workshop will help you understand how children learn to read and the specific instructional practices we use at Heritage, including teaching phonics with an Orton-Gillingham approach, reading living books, and the process of shared inquiry. You will walk away with some guidance about selecting literature for your children and supporting them as they become great readers. Though all parents are welcome to attend, this workshop is designed for parents of students in EI-C2 and those who have younger children at home; it will be led by Mallory Dawson (Heritage Librarian and mother), Kaylin Moran (Heritage Director of Student Support), and Hannah Wight (Heritage Enrichment II teacher and mother).
